Human Research Ethics Committee

TERMS OF REFERENCE

1. TITLE OF COMMITTEE

Human Research Ethics Committee

2. ESTABLISHMENT

The Human Research Ethics Committee is established under Part 3 Section 15 of the Charles Darwin University Act 2003.

3. FUNCTIONS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The Human Research Ethics Committee operates in accordance with the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research. The Committee is responsible for the ethical design, review and conduct of human research conducted by researchers and students under the auspices of the University.

The functions and responsibilities of the Human Research Ethics Committee, are to:

- Consider the ethical aspects and implications of proposals to conduct research involving humans that involves more than a low risk and proposals to undertake Indigenous Research;
- Ensure that researchers are appropriately qualified in planning, conducting and reporting research that is relevant to the proposal, and students are appropriately supervised, to conduct research;
- Promote and provide oversight for the proper arrangements for security and disposal of data collected in the course of research;
- Certify that research protocols satisfy the ethical standards and codes presented in the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research and the Australian Code for the Responsible Conduct of Research;
- Make recommendations or impose conditions on research proposals to ensure they meet requirements and are ethically acceptable;
- Identify and manage all conflicts of interest that may affect the research or approval process in accordance with the University’s procedures;
- Monitor ongoing activity including annual reports, variations and adverse incident reports that arise during the implementation of approved research protocols;
- Impose requirements for the amendment of an approved protocol or suspend an approved protocol if necessary;
- Ensure decisions are transparent, consistent, and promptly communicated;
- Oversee and regularly assess the University’s ethical review processes, including the criteria for allocating research to different levels of review – Panel Review and Executive Review;
- Receive appeals against a decision or conduct of Committee or Panel members;
- Provide advice on any complaint regarding the approval of proposals or the conduct of approved research protocols;
- Hold confidential all deliberations, discussions and all information in proposals not in the public domain; and
• Monitor, review and make recommendations on Governance Documents about research involving human participants.

For research that carries only low risk, the University will establish a Human Research Ethics Panel under Panel Review - Category PR, to:

• Consider the ethical aspects and implications of proposals to conduct research involving humans that that carries only low risk;
• Ensure that researchers are appropriately qualified in planning, conducting and reporting research that is relevant to the proposal, and students are appropriately supervised, to conduct research;
